CHANGES IN RULES NECESSARY

Another Season Expected to Prove Pleasant Football Even.

More Satisfactory—Coaches Should Give More Attention to Offensive Play—Past Year Successful For Small Colleges.

The Army-Navy game on Saturday, which was won by the Navy on two field goals kicked by Brown late in the last quarter and which closed the season, brought out no new football which wasn't shown under the old code. While this season's growth campaign has been productive of better games than during the last few seasons, none of the stronger teams of the east has developed an offensive play or system of attack which seemed possible after the rules were revised last season, says the New York Times. Nothing aside from old-fashioned football tactics was shown in the Army-Navy game. Both teams used line bucking plays, wearing their backs out in hopeless snatching against strong defense. There was a great lack of variety of play.

The championship goes without question to Harvard, yet Harvard followed old football tactics all season. The crimson had a carefully drilled football machine, mechanical in action rather than brilliant or spontaneous. Victories over Brown, Vanderbilt, Dartmouth, Princeton and Yale give Harvard as clear a claim to the title as football team in the east has had in several seasons.

While there have been more touchdowns during the season with four rushes to carry the ball ten yards, the running open game has not been developed as the football rulemakers had anticipated. Coaches realized that they could not develop a defense good enough to offset the additional privileges given to the attack. The result was that in many of the big games the teams had to resort to the kicking game.

Good Offensive Teams.
Two teams developed the offensive game to a high degree, these eleven being Princeton and the Carlisle Indians under Coach Glenn Warner. Here was the most successful scoring team of the year, with a fast, open attack, a highly developed interference, skill with the forward pass, all built around Jim Thorpe, one of the most sensational players the game has developed. The Indians' great offensive game was developed to its high state of efficiency, however, at the expense of the defensive game, and it was this uncertainty feature of their play which prevented their being the team from being a great even.

Small Teams Successful.
It has been an unusually successful season for the smaller college eleven, which in the past has been the best form early in the season. These teams have profited by the new rules, the additional advantage allowed the offensive play giving them better opportunity against the big eleven. Many of the coaches have been backward about making use of all the advantages given them by the change in the past season. Most of them have followed what they believed to be a safe and sane policy. But it is believed that another season under the new code will lead to a greater development of the running game.

A feather in the cap of the rulemakers is the small number of serious injuries this season. While the four rushes allowed to gain ten yards has brought back into use old-fashioned line bucking tactics, the elimination of pulling, tugging and pushing the runner has practically done away with the danger of serious gridiron injuries. After all, this was the one thing that the rulemakers aimed at.

HARRIMAN LIST FEVERISH.
Morgan Decision Still Has an Unsettling Influence on Market.

New York, Dec. 3.—The influence of the Harriman merger decision by the United States supreme court seems heavily over the stock market today. Fluctuations in the Harriman securities were feverish, and the list as a whole was unsettled. There was a great deal of theorizing as to the probable effect of the dissolution decree, and while opinions varied sharply, the preponderance of speculative sentiment was bearish and prices were borne down sharply.

Selling was congested on Southern Pacific, which dropped 3 points on unusually heavy dealings. Union Pacific, after a strong opening, yielded to 1-16 before yesterday's close. Many railroads and industrial were depressed a point or more. The market rallied toward the close.

In the absence of authoritative statements from the Harriman managers directly concerned as to the probable effects of the Harriman dissolution decree, the problem was viewed in varying lights. On the constructive side, it was argued that the Harriman managers would be able to work out a plan of partition no less successfully than was the case of the dissolution of the Standard Oil and American Tobacco companies. Possible benefits to stockholders in the distribution of assets were held up as bullish factors. Traders who took a bearish view held that application of the principles applied to the application of the supreme court in yesterday's decision would be of far reaching influence not only in other cases to be heard on later by that court, but ultimately in determining the status of many corporations which have not thus far been called to court. In the case of Southern Pacific, its special weakness was attributed to speculation as to its fortunes once it is cut loose from the present corporation under which it has been built up to its present state.

Greatly increased expenses of administration under the new regime also were taken into account. Tension in money was somewhat relaxed, and easier conditions were looked for, with the call from the national controller out of the way, and gold coming in from London.

The bond market was heavy. Total sales, par value, $2,550,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

that Kilbane knocked Attell down, the champion's rapid succession of blows to the head, Kilbane kept following him around the ring, landing six blows to every one he received. Attell's blows lacked power and he could not stand the champion's rushes. Attell's face was bleeding and he could hardly stand when led from the ring after the fight was stopped.

MAY ELECT BROWN

IN PLACE OF LYNCH
Effort Under Way for Louisville Newspaper Man to Succeed New Britain Man as National League President.

Certain National league baseball men believe that they will be able to elect a successor to President Thomas H. Lynch at the meeting in New York this month, according to the New York Sun. This fact became known yesterday as a sequel to the story from Louisville, Ky., that Robert W. Brown, who has just resigned the position of secretary of the New York club, would announce himself a candidate for the presidency. Brown, according to inside information, hasn't a chance. The man who has been groomed for the National league's presidency is Robert W. Brown of Louisville, city editor of a newspaper in that city, and a former grand exalted ruler of the Elks, chief advocate of Mr. Brown's election is C. H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club, who has been in Milwaukee attending the minor league meeting and who will leave several western cities in the National league circuit before arriving in New York next Wednesday.

Ebbets has been doing quiet misanthropic work for the world, and since last September. He has received assurance from C. W. Murphy of the Cubs that Chicago's vote will be cast for the president of the league. Ebbets also has guaranteed the vote of the Philadelphia club. From Milwaukee last night came the interesting information that the vote of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati clubs, controlled respectively by Barney Dreyfuss and Garry Herrmann, had been given to Ebbets. Ebbets is also considering the vote of the St. Louis club.

Two years ago, when Lynch was elected to his present office at the suggestion of President Brush of the New York club, a deadlock between Ebbets and John M. Ward was broken. Brown was nominated instead of John A. Ebbets, who was supported by Herrmann, who was supported by the vote of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati clubs, controlled respectively by Barney Dreyfuss and Garry Herrmann. Ebbets, however, did not have sufficient strength to win in one race.

Ward, however, so that his friends finally accepted Lynch. Ebbets therefore decided several months ago to make a dash for the man to the front, confident that his nomination would meet with the approval of Herrmann and Dreyfuss and that the vote of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati clubs would be given to him. Brown's election would be a certainty. Ebbets and Lynch have not spoken for more than a year. Soon after Lynch's election he was elected to the position of president of the league and subsequently removed the Brooklyn man from the schedule committee. Ebbets vowed no statement concerning the affair of the league's president ever since.

It appears that Lynch's trouble with Ebbets of the Philadelphia club, which has been the subject of much talk, has been used by Ebbets as a reason why Brown should be elected. Other magnates, it is said, agree with Ebbets in this view. The league has been given to the Ebbets charges by Lynch, and that the latter has overstepped his authority in attempting to bring the league out of the hands of the league. Ebbets and his allies insist that Ebbets' signed statement reflecting upon the integrity of the umpires during the game between the Philadelphia and the New York club, has been taken seriously; that Ebbets' hot-headedness and the idle talk carried on without weight with the baseball public, has been the cause of the league's loss of prestige. ## BASKETBALL TEAM

WALKS INTO WESTERLY.
Tatville Boys Forced to Leave Auto When Engine Breaks Down.

The Tatville basketball team started out for Norfolk Tuesday evening, where they were to play the Lobsters. The party left Tatville postoffice in an auto truck about 6:30 o'clock, and had got well into the country when the engine of the auto truck broke down. The driver tried to repair the engine, but did not succeed. The men got out of the truck and started off in a hunt for a telephone, which they found in a farm house about two miles down the road. They informed their friends in Tatville of the trouble and stated that they did not know exactly where they were, but thought that they were near Westerly. After receiving directions from the Westerly road, they started off for that city on foot and are expected home this morning.

Hempstead to Step Into Brush's Shoes.

Indianapolis, Dec. 3.—H. N. Hempstead, son-in-law of the late John T. Brush, president of the New York National league baseball club, will leave here Saturday for New York, where next week he will represent the team at the meeting of the league. Mr. Hempstead is vice president of the club, but never has taken part actively in the management of the team. He said that he would make no statement concerning the affairs of the late president until he becomes more familiar with the management.

International League Convenes.

New York, Dec. 3.—President Edward Barrow today issued a call for the annual meeting of the International league for Monday, Dec. 8, at the Hotel Victoria, New York. When the club owners voted to adopt the international league for their league last fall they also voted a five year term to President Barrow, so the league will have no presidential election this year, and only minor matters are on the business programme.

Against Betting on Races.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 3.—Justice Lane of the supreme court in a decision handed down today held that the maintenance of pool rooms where results of horse races are wagered on is a misdemeanor, and that their existence is illegal. He recommends that injunctions be secured before the criminal laws are invoked. It is said there are many pool rooms in this state, all of which are ostensibly acting as agents for firms in other states.

Robinson, N. F. A. Captain.

At a meeting of the Norwich Academy football team on the close of school, Tuesday, Harold Robinson was elected captain of the 1913 eleven. Robinson, 14, was chosen manager, and Barry, 15, assistant manager. Robinson is an upper middle. He has played a strong game at quarterback during the past season, and is popular with his team mates.

BADEN SHOWED HIS CLASS.

Made Consistent Winning Record Throughout the Past Season.

For 24 years the Transylvania stake, at Lexington, Ky., has been the race that has determined the racing champion of the year. This is because it is a nominating event in which the entries are transferable, and as the horses are not named until almost the last hour it brings together the best that have raced here and there throughout the country. From a racing point of view, the Transylvania of last month was the poorest of the 22 that preceded it, having had only four starters out of 20 original nominations, but, in winning it, Baden proved his title to the racing championship nor one clinched his title more cleanly than he did when he marched off with the race in straight heats and beat into submission Cheery, who had been a giant against all others who has met this year.

Baden is a beautiful horse, six years old by Hagen (son of Hagen, 3:01 1-4, and Ligera, by Arion, 2:07 3-4), dam by Krimlin, 2:07 3-4, who won this race in 1892, and he traces three times to Miss Russell, the great mother star produced in addition to Maud S., 2:03 3-4, others that are responsible for so many in the 2:30 list. Cheery, more than any other horse, was built on cart-horse lines to withstand the wear and tear of a strenuous campaign, and with it he was a glutton for work. Baden, on the other hand, is a light horse, not even in his best year showed such consistency and downright bulldog tenacity as has characterized the 1912 campaign of Baden.

When the mile track campaign opened at Lansing, Mich., on July 2, Baden was the favorite for the world, and for 13 consecutive weeks he was built to fulfill an engagement. He has been beaten here and there, only to come back and break in victory. This year he won from Lansing, Lexington ten races, and has been placed in four of the other five. He contested 15 races of all kinds, which is as many as some horses called great have won in a lifetime, and of these he won thirty, which average 2:07 1-2.

He has been beaten twice by Esther, 2:06 1-4, and once by Harry Direct, Oakdale and Dave Hall, but in turn he has defeated Esther seven times, Oakdale three times, Dave Hall twice and Harry Direct in one race. In addition he has won every race, four that he has trotted against that grand racing machine, Cheery. His winning record for the year is the largest ever won by a stallion in one year. Baden's unparalleled career can be carried a bit further by combining his 1911 and 1912 campaigns. In one race, 18 victories, four second moneys, three third moneys, three fourth moneys, and just one blank out of 23 starts in as many weeks of racing.

BETTER THIRD BASEMEN.

Showing of Dangerous Corner Artists Improves—Zimmerman the Leader.

The third basing line of 1912 was of an extremely brilliant character, as the work around the far corner has been for several seasons. Third basemen, in recent years, have acquired a mechanical perfection in fielding the position that the rest of the country has not. They go in after bunts with more accuracy than in the earlier days; they can smother grounders on either side with a certainty that was not there in the earlier days. Twenty years ago, third basemen were continually being run over by the batter, and the third baseman's head, forcing that unhappy animal to make frequent journeys of a retrieving character, while the sureness of even the best of them was on ground balls was so uncertain that the sight of a ball leaping toward the far corner, with men on bases, always filled the public mind with uneasiness. Now, the third baseman is so mechanically perfect that the sight of the hottest grounder going at him worries the public mind, and if it were humming its way to the human trap on second.

could field over .885 on the season was third sackers field over .825 and could shirk the chances, either. Much of this improvement, no doubt is due to the glove; but there has been a vast gain in 20 years, when you consider the skill with which grounders, bunts and flies are handled and the improvement, however, hasn't been so recent as some of the critics imagine, but began right after the thicker gloves came into use. None of the modern third sackers has anything on Collins or Bill Bradley, and the all-round class of 1912, though equally mechanically to the Collins-Bradley stuff, is not up to their mark in generalship and execution. It may be remarked, just incidentally, that the modern third basemen have an odd tendency to throw too low, rather than the high throw of the earlier days. This is a mistake, and Whitney called them overhead—the 1912 gang throw them among the first basemen's feet, and the first sacker who can scoop them up is the white-haired child.

All things considered, it is hard to see where anyone can be ranked above Heinie Zimmerman for all-round value among the third basemen of 1912—at least, so far as the National league is concerned. Zimmerman, formerly a general utility person who wasn't counted quite good enough to intrude with any position as a regular, went to the bag for the Cubs after Lennox filled the hole. Zimmerman was on the hoof. Heinie surprised from the very jump with the way he handled the job. His attention to grounders, liners, flies and throws was all that could be desired, and he came in on bunts with a speed that had never been expected of him. At the bat, he proceeded to tear up the National league, and finished with a record equaled by few third basemen in history—possibly by none in recent seasons. Zim hit about .377, and fielded, it is believed, well over .925.

The second rank among the National league third basemen is, when you study out all the points, the apparent property of Bobby Byrne, Pittsburgh's little demon. Byrne batted steadily and was a dangerous slugger in the benches. His third basing was artistic and heady—crazier than that of Heinie Zimmerman, and rather better in most ways, while Zim's batting gives him the preference.

WALSH LEADS IN SHUTOUTS.

Blanks Opponents 55 Times During Career.

Massive Ed Walsh, Comiskey's man of steel, is the only American league hurler who has passed the half-century notch in shutouts, but two other men now on the reserve lists of teams of the junior organization may get by this mark next season. Walsh has led his adversaries on goose-eggs 55 times since he struck fast company in 1894—a most marvelous record considering that during the first two seasons he was on the old Roman's payroll he succeeded in blanking his rivals only twice. Of the pitchers who stand a chance to tie Walsh's white on their adversaries before they go to the minors or into retirement, Philadelphia claims one in Eddie Plank, the veteran southpaw, and Chicago the other in G. Harris White, who is also getting along in years. The Gettysburg guide has blanked the enemy on 45 occasions, while the Gettysburg graduate has done similarly 45 times. G. Edward Wardell had used the whitewash brush 47 times before Robert Lee Hodge, 1911's 121st captain, took to the mound under Joe Cantillon, and Eddie Jones had wielded this implement
